

Masks: Uncovering the Future of Local Government's Role in a Public Health Crisis

Presented by: Alan Zimmet and Nikki C. Day

Alan Zimmet joined Bryant Miller Olive's State and Local Government Practice Group and Litigation Practice Group in 2012. Mr. Zimmet has more than 30 years of legal experience and is board certified by The Florida Bar in the area of City, County and Local Government Law. He also is a member of the District of Columbia Bar and works from the firm's Tampa and Washington D.C. offices. Mr. Zimmet represents private entities and local governments, including cities, counties and special districts. His litigation practice focuses on construction matters and other complex civil litigation cases. Mr. Zimmet is also a certified circuit court mediator in Florida and a trained arbitrator. Mr. Zimmet is rated AV Preeminent by Martindale-Hubbell. He is regularly invited to write and speak about legal topics for such organizations as the Florida League of Cities, the Public Risk Management Association, Stetson University College of Law, and the Florida Bar. Mr. Zimmet graduated from Franklin & Marshall College in 1977, with a bachelor's degree in Government, and from The George Washington University Law School, with honors, in 1980.

Nikki C. Day is a shareholder and practice group leader at Bryant Miller Olive P.A., where her primary practice includes representing city, county, and state governmental entities in all manner of legal matters, including complex litigation. Mrs. Day serves as City Attorney for the City of Safety Harbor, City of Dunedin, Assistant City Attorney for the City of Largo, and as special counsel to local governments across the state. She is board certified by The Florida Bar in City, County & Local Government Law, and has been named among the "Legal Elite" by Florida Trend Magazine, the "Super Lawyers" by Thompson Reuters, and the "Top 40 Under 40" by the Florida Business Observer. Prior to joining BMO, Mrs. Day worked in finance for Global Spectrum, an event facility management company, and as an accountant for a C.P.A. firm in St. Petersburg. A Florida native, Mrs. Day earned her law degree from Stetson University School of Law in 2009, cum laude. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree in Communications, cum laude, from the University of Central Florida in 2006.

Masks: Uncovering the Future of Local Government's Role in a Public Health Crisis

Alan Zimmet and Nikki C. Day
Bryant Miller Olive P.A.

Abstract. Local governments, in times of emergency, must often make difficult decisions to balance the general public health and safety with individual rights and interests.¹ It is recognized that in responding to emergencies, general purpose local governments (including counties) may take actions exceeding the scope of traditional governmental functions to protect the public health, safety, and welfare.² Masks or face covering requirements have been particularly controversial during the COVID-19 pandemic and have shed light on the framework for analyzing local government regulations and roles in public health emergencies.

I. Response to public health emergencies is an exercise of police power

- a. Historically, during health emergencies such as pandemics, state and local governments have broad authority to act in the public interest. For example, courts have held that a state could mandate individuals receive smallpox vaccines. Jacobson v. Cmmw. of Massachusetts, 197 U.S. 11, 12 (1905).
- b. In another historical case, Compagnie Francaise de Nav. a Vapeur v. Bd. of Health of State of Louisiana, SCOTUS held that it was constitutional for a state to enforce involuntary quarantines. 186 U.S. 380, 380–83 (1902).
- c. These historical cases, while decided at the turn of the 20th century, have seen renewed discussion during the COVID-19 pandemic.
 - i. Jacobson, for example, has been discussed, examined, and relied upon by federal courts for measures related to COVID-19 emergency measures 178 times from April 6, 2020, through November 18, 2020.
 - ii. SCOTUS has also continued to recognize Jacobson in analyzing measures taken in response to COVID-19. S. Bay United Pentecostal

¹ David G. Tucker & Alfred O. Bragg II., Florida's Law of Storms: Emergency Management, Local Government, and the Police Power, 30 STETSON L. REV. 837 (2001).

² Id. at 839

Church v. Newsom, 140 S. Ct. 1613 (2020) (Roberts, C.J., concurring) (quoting Jacobson and opining that “Our Constitution principally entrusts ‘[t]he safety and the health of the people’ to the politically accountable officials of the States ‘to guard and protect’”).

- d. In times of emergency, all rights, (even fundamental rights) may be “temporarily limited or suspended.” Smith v. Avino, 91 F.3d 105, 109 (11th Cir. 1996).

II. Applicable Legal Framework to Local Government Emergency Responses

- a. Local government’s response to emergency situations must still withstand judicial scrutiny under the applicable standard of review. At a minimum, actions must be rationally related to a legitimate governmental purpose. San Antonio Independent School Dist. v. Rodriguez, 411 U.S. 1, 17, 93 S.Ct. 1278, 1288, 36 L.Ed.2d 16 (1973); Cf. Lyng v. Automobile Workers, 485 U.S. 360, 370, 108 S.Ct. 1184, —, 99 L.Ed.2d 380 (1988). Regulations based on race or national origin, e.g., Loving v. Virginia, 388 U.S. 1, 11, 87 S.Ct. 1817, 1823, 18 L.Ed.2d 1010 (1967), and regulations affecting fundamental rights, e.g., Harper v. Virginia Bd. of Elections, 383 U.S. 663, 672, 86 S.Ct. 1079, 1084–85, 16 L.Ed.2d 169 (1966), are given the most exacting scrutiny. Between these extremes of rational basis review and strict scrutiny lies a level of intermediate scrutiny, which generally has been applied to discriminatory classifications based on sex or illegitimacy. See, e.g., Mississippi University for Women v. Hogan, 458 U.S. 718, 723–724, and n. 9, 102 S.Ct. 3331, 3336, and n. 9, 73 L.Ed.2d 1090 (1982); Mills v. Habluetzel, 456 U.S. 91, 99, 102 S.Ct. 1549, 1554–55, 71 L.Ed.2d 770 (1982); Craig v. Boren, 429 U.S. 190, 197, 97 S.Ct. 451, 456–57, 50 L.Ed.2d 397 (1976); Mathews v. Lucas, 427 U.S. 495, 505–506, 96 S.Ct. 2755, 2762–2763, 49 L.Ed.2d 651 (1976).

b. Rational Basis Review

- ➔ “[T]he [action] must be rationally related to the achievement of a legitimate government purpose.” Joel v. City of Orlando, 232 F.3d 1353, 1357 (11th Cir. 2000). This standard is highly deferential to the government actors. Id. at 1358. This is a difficult standard for challengers to overcome in public health emergencies, as it is undisputed that protecting the public health is a legitimate government purpose. See, e.g., Henry v. DeSantis, 20-CV-80729, 2020 WL 2479447, at *6–7 (S.D. Fla. May 14, 2020). Only irrational and arbitrary government measures fail to meet this standard.

c. Intermediate Scrutiny

→ To withstand intermediate scrutiny, a statutory classification must be substantially related to an important governmental objective. Clark v. Jeter, 486 U.S. 456 (1988).

d. Strict Scrutiny

→ If the response “classifies by race, alienage, or national origin,” strict scrutiny must be applied and the government must provide a compelling interest. City of Cleburne, Tex. v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 440 (1985). The action must be “suitably tailored” to serve this compelling interest. Id. This scrutiny also applies to actions discriminatory towards religious groups. Church of the Lukumi Babalu Aye, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 508 U.S. 520, 522 (1993). Combating COVID-19 is a compelling interest. See S. Bay United Pentecostal Church, 140 S. Ct. at 1614 (Kavanaugh, J., dissenting) (conceding that a state “undoubtedly has a compelling interest in combating the spread of COVID-19 and protecting the health of its citizens” and arguing against the majority on other grounds). Issues arise when discussing whether government actions are suitably tailored to this interest, as actions will be scrutinized to determine if there was a less restrictive alternative.

→ Applied to COVID-19 emergency in S. Bay United Pentecostal Church v. Newsom. 140 S. Ct. 1614 (2020). The dissenting opinion authored by Justice Kavanaugh agreed that slowing the spread of COVID-19 was a compelling government interest, but disagreed that a government action could place additional restrictions on religious worship services that were not present on similar secular business and still be considered narrowly tailored to the government’s compelling interest. While Kavanaugh simply dissented in Newsom, lower courts have found his argument persuasive. See, e.g., Soos v. Cuomo, 120CV651GLSDJS, 2020 WL 3488742 (N.D.N.Y. June 26, 2020).

→ The new SCOTUS majority has endorsed Justice Kavanaugh’s dissenting opinion from Newsom. The Court granted injunctive relief enjoining New York’s Governor Cuomo from enforcing an executive order that placed occupancy limits on religious worship buildings during the COVID-19 Pandemic. This was done in Roman Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn, New York v. Cuomo, as the case was being litigated in the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. 592 U. S. ____ (2020). Governor Cuomo’s order placed religious buildings in “red zones,” subjecting them to stricter occupancy limits than similar secular businesses. Id. The Court held that, “Because the challenged restrictions are not ‘neutral’ and of ‘general applicability,’ they must satisfy ‘strict scrutiny,’ and this means that they must be ‘narrowly tailored’ to serve a ‘compelling’ state interest.” Id. The Court further held that “[s]temming the spread of COVID-19 [was] unquestionably a compelling interest,” but that “it [was] hard to see how [Cuomo’s restrictions could] be regarded as ‘narrowly tailored.’” Id. This was because there were “other less restrictive rules” that could have been adopted, such as rules considering the size of each separate religious worship building when deciding how to restrict occupancy. Id.

e. Preemption.

- ➔ In addition to federal constitutional standards for review, state constitutional issues regarding preemption must be resolved.

- ➔ MIAMI-DADE COUNTY, Appellant, v. MIAMI GARDENS SQUARE ONE, INC., et al., Appellees. 3rd District, 45 Fla. L. Weekly D2480a. Here, the issue was whether a Florida state-level executive order, prohibiting local government from preventing an individual from working or operating a business in response to COVID-19, preempted a County emergency order imposing a curfew. The court held that it did not. It did not expressly preempt the county order, because a curfew did not expressly prevent any individual from working or operating a business. It did not implicitly preempt the county order because there was no useful public policy in broadly construing the state order to prevent a local government from deciding a local issue. Local governments may take actions that supplement state actions, so long as they are not contradictory.

III. Preventive Measures Public Health Crises

a. Mask (Face Covering) Mandates and Orders.

- ➔ In Pinellas County, Florida, the BOCC meeting to discuss an ordinance mandating that citizens wear face coverings lasted until 9:30 pm, with nearly 100 residents calling in with public comment. Kellie Cowan and Jordan Bowan, Pinellas County Commissioners Approve Mandatory Face Mask Ordinance, Fox 13 Tampa Bay (June 23, 2020), <https://www.fox13news.com/news/pinellas-county-commissioners-approve-mandatory-face-mask-ordinance-requiring-face-masks>.
- ➔ Power v. Leon County, 2020 WL 4919774 (Fla.Cir.Ct.) (Trial Order) presents one of the most comprehensive analysis of emergency orders requiring face coverings in public places in response to COVID-19. The court analyzed fundamental rights under Jacobson, right to privacy under the Florida Constitution, substantive due process, vagueness, equal protection, and freedom of religion issues with mandated face coverings and upheld the county's emergency ordinance and declared that the ordinance did not violate any constitution right. The court also questioned whether any heightened scrutiny should apply to face covering regulations. A complete copy of the opinion is included as ATTACHMENT 1.

b. ADA Issues.

- ➔ Mandatory face covering ordinances have also raised issues under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). The U.S. Department of Justice issued a press release on June 30, 2020, with regard to face covering regulations: "The ADA does not provide a blanket exemption to people with disabilities from complying with legitimate safety requirements necessary for safe operations."
- ➔ However, this does not mean that a local government is not required to provide reasonable accommodations upon request.
- ➔ Reasonable accommodations require an individual assessment that the accommodation is determined to be necessary for the individual to fully use the service, program or activity and does not:

- c. Fundamentally alter the nature of the program, service, or activity;
- d. Result in undue burden or expense;
- e. Result in a direct threat the safety and health of others.

ATTACHMENT 1

2020 WL 4919774 (Fla.Cir.Ct.) (Trial Order)
Circuit Court of Florida.
Leon County

Evan J. POWER, Plaintiff,

v.

LEON COUNTY, a Political Subdivision of the State of Florida, Defendant.

No. 2020-CA-001200.

July 27, 2020.

Final Judgment

John C. Cooper, Judge.

*1 This case came for final hearing before the Court on July 10, 2020, and for hearing on the Motion to Dismiss Sled by Defendant, Leon County, Florida (the “County”), as well as the two Motions for Judicial Notice filed by the County, and the Motion for Judicial Notice filed by plaintiff, Evan J. Power (“Mr. Power.”). This Court deferred ruling on the County’s Motion to Dismiss and granted the three Motions for Judicial Notice filed by the parties. This Court has reviewed and considered the record, the memoranda, case law, exhibits, and is otherwise fully advised in the premises. Based on the record presented, the Court finds as follows:

FACTS

We currently face a global pandemic in the form of COVID-19. Chief Justice Roberts recently described COVID-19 as “a novel severe acute respiratory illness that has killed..... more than 100,000 nationwide” and noted that “at this time, there is no known cure, no effective treatment, and no vaccine” and, “[b]ecause people may be infected but asymptomatic, they may unwittingly infect others,” See S. Bay United Pentecostal Church v. Newsom, 140 S. Cl 1613, 1613 (2020) (Roberts, C.J., concurring).

COVID-19 is an unusual virus in that it can be spread by asymptomatic individuals. The main method of transmission is via airborne particles (aerosol) caused by people coughing, sneezing, and even talking. Merely exhaling can cause particles to become airborne. Facial coverings, as well as social distancing, are important for minimizing the transmission of this highly contagious and sometimes lethal virus.¹ We know that face coverings: protect the public from someone who knows they are sick, and it protects the public from someone who does not know they are sick. We also know that face coverings protect the person wearing the covering from aerosol particles of the virus that linger in the air. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the World Health Organization, medical associations, and scientific associations suggest wear a face covering to slow the spread of COVID-19.

Several measures—at the federal, state, and local level—have been taken to slow the spread of COVID-19. On March 13, 2020, the President of the United States declared a national state of emergency. In Florida, Governor DeSantis declared a state of emergency via Executive Order 20-52 on March 9, 2020.² And in Leon County, the Leon County Board of County Commissioners (the “Board”) has issued at least weekly Emergency Orders (“Proclamations”) each week since March 16, 2020.

On April 1, 2020, Governor DeSantis issued Executive Order 20-91, putting in place a statewide “safer at home” order, directing the closure of “non-essential services and activities” and limiting the movement of persons. Then, on April 29, 2020, Governor DeSantis issued Executive Order 20-112 to begin Phase 1 of re-opening of the state. Executive Order 20-112 rolled back many of the restrictions found in Executive Order 20-91 and permitted more retail businesses and restaurants to open. The re-opening of the state has led to more contact between individuals and the potential for increased community spread.

*2 Despite efforts to mitigate the spread of COVID-19, the number of cases continues to rise in Florida—and specifically in Leon County. On June 19, 2020, the Florida Department of Health reported 51 new positive cases of COVID-19 in Leon County. On June 22, 2020, Florida reported more than 4,000 new cases of COVID-19 in a single day. Moreover, Megan Gumke, Regional Epidemiologist with the Florida Department of Health, testified that more people have COVID-19 than has been reported.³ Ms. Gumke testified that one of the metrics used by Department of Health to track the spread of Covid-19 is the positivity rate, which is the percentage of individuals tested who test positive. In Leon County the positivity rate has been steadily rising from .72 percent during the first week of June, to 4.36 percent for the second week of June, to 9.21 percent for the very last week of June.

To further slow the rate of new cases, on June 23, 2020, the Board held a special meeting for the single purpose of discussing the recent increase in COVID-19 cases in Leon County and to consider additional mitigation efforts. Prior to and during the meeting, the Board was provided information regarding mandatory face covering requirements adopted in other parts of the State along with information from the Florida Department of Health confirming a spike in local positive COVID-19 cases. Chairman Bryan Desloge testified that he had numerous conversations with local, hospitals, medical providers, the GEO of a local health plan, local universities, and entities representing business interests regarding whether to mandate individuals wear face coverings in public. He further testified that there was universal support from these stakeholders for the County to require individuals to wear face coverings in public because there are individuals who will not wear face coverings, unless they are mandated.

The Board unanimously adopted face covering requirements through Emergency Ordinance 20-15 (“Emergency Ordinance” or “Ordinance”). The Emergency Ordinance requires an individual in an indoor business establishment to wear a face covering while in that business establishment. Id. § 3.(i). “Business establishment” is defined by the Emergency Ordinance to mean:

... a location with a roof overhead under which any business is conducted, goods are made or stored or processed or where services are rendered. The term “business establishment” includes transportation network companies, such as Ubers and Lyft, vehicles operated for mass transit, taxis, jitneys, limousines for hire, rental cars, and other passenger vehicles for hire. The term, “business establishment” includes locations where non-profit, governmental, and quasi-governmental entities facilitate public interactions and conduct business. The term “business establishment” also includes places of worship.

Id. § 2.(ii). Notably, the requirement to wear a face covering does not apply in the following circumstances:

1. A child under the age of 6;
2. Persons who have trouble breathing due to a chronic pre-existing condition or individuals with a documented or demonstrable medical problem;
3. Public safety, fire, and other life safety and health care personnel, as their personal protective equipment requirements will be governed by their respective agencies;
4. Persons exercising while observing at least 6 feet of distancing from another
5. Restaurant and bar patrons while eating or drinking;
6. Business owners, managers, and employees who are in an area of a business establishment that is not open to customers, patrons, or the public, provided that 6 feet of distance exists between persons;

*3 7. An individual in a lodging establishment who is inside of the lodging unit.

Id. § 3.(ii). The Emergency ordinance does not impose criminal penalties for a violation. Instead, a first offense of the Emergency Ordinance results in a fine of $50; a second offense results in a fine of $125; and a third and each subsequent offense results in a fine of $250. Id. § 4(ii),

APPLICATION OF CONTROLLING LAW

Standard of Review for Constitutional Challenges

The Complaint fails to indicate whether Plaintiff's challenge is a facial challenge or an as-applied challenge. An as-applied challenge is an argument that a particular piece of legislation is constitutional on its face, yet is unconstitutional as applied to a particular case or party because of its discriminatory effects.  Miles v. City of Edgewater Police Dep./Preferred Governmental Claims Solutions, 190 So. 3d 171,178 (Fla. 1st DCA 2016). In contrast, a facial challenge asserts that a statute always operates unconstitutionally. Id. Because Plaintiff does not claim that the Emergency Ordinance is unconstitutional with respect to a certain set of facts which leads to a discriminatory effect, it would appear that his claim is that the Emergency Ordinance is facially unconstitutional.

“To succeed on a facial challenge, the challenger must demonstrate that no set of circumstances exists in which the statute can be constitutionally valid.” Fraternal Order of Police, Miami Lodge 20 v. City of Miami, 243 So. 3d 894, 897 (Fla. 2018). Showing a challenged law “might operate unconstitutionally in some hypothetical circumstance is insufficient to render it unconstitutional on its face.” Ogborn v. Zingale, 988 So. 2d 56, 59 (Fla. 1st DCA 2008) (quoting Cashatt v. State, 783 So. 2d 430,434 (Fla. 1st DCA 2004)). Therefore, a facial challenge is more difficult than an as-applied challenge as a general matter. Id.

Moreover, courts should not overturn legislative enactments lightly because “statutes come clothed with a presumption of constitutionality” and “must be construed whenever possible to effect a constitutional outcome.”  Brinkmann v. Francois, 184 So. 3d 504., 507-508 (Fla. 2016) (citations omitted). This presumption of constitutionality can only be overcome by a showing of invalidity “beyond a reasonable doubt,” meaning the presumption applies unless the legislative enactment is “clearly erroneous, arbitrary, or wholly unwarranted.” State v. Hodges, 506 So. 2d 437, 439 (Fla. 1st DCA 1987) (citing State v. State Bd of Educ. of Fla., 467 So. 2d 294 (Fla. 1985)). “All doubts as to validity must be resolved in favor of constitutionality, ... and if a constitutional interpretation is available, the courts must adopt that construction.” Hodges, 506 So. 2d at 439 (internal citation omitted).

Against this backdrop, this Court weighed Plaintiff's constitutional claims.

I. Plaintiff's Claim for Injunctive Relief

The purpose of a temporary Injunction is to preserve the status quo while final injunctive relief is sought. Dep't of Health v. Bayfront HMA Med. Ctr., LLC, 236 So. 446, 471 (Fla. 1st DCA 2018 (citation omitted)). A temporary injunction is considered an extraordinary remedy and should only be granted sparingly. Id. (citation omitted). To obtain; a temporary injunction, the movant must establish; (1) a substantial likelihood of success on the merits; (2) a, lack of an adequate remedy at law; (3) the likelihood of irreparable harm absent the entry of an injunction; and (4) the injunctive relief will serve the public interest Id. at 472.

A. Likelihood of Success on the Merits

*4 “A substantial likelihood of success on the merits is shown if good reasons for anticipating that result are demonstrated.” City v Jacksonville v. Naegele Outdoor Advert. Co., 634 So 2d. 750, 753 (Fla. 1st DCA. 1994). “It is not enough that a merely colorable claim is advanced.” Id. Here, Plaintiff has failed to show a substantial likelihood of success on the merits.

It is important to view the actions of the Board in the context in which they were taken. The COVID-19 pandemic has continued for several months and has, as of July 2, 2020, killed approximately 112,700 persons in the United States. In Florida, the cases are continuing to rise. As of July 2, 2020, the Florida Department of Health has reported a total of 169,106 positive cases within the state, including 1,377 positive cases in Leon County. There can be no question that an emergency exists. See Dodero, et al., v. Walton Cty., Case No. 3:20-CV05358-RV.HTC (N.D. Fla, Apr. 17, 2020) (“We are in the midst of a national health emergency. and it seems highly likely at this stage of the case that the county has the authority to take the measure that it has in order to address that emergency.”)⁴

It has long been recognized that when, as here, there is an emergency, the police power gives governmental authorities power to act for the public welfare that they might not otherwise have. This line of cases extends back to the 1905 United States Supreme Court case of  Jacobson v. Commonwealth of Massachusetts, 197 U.S. 11 (1905):

The liberty secured by the Constitution of the United States to every person within its jurisdiction does not import and absolute right in each person to be, at all time and in all circumstances, wholly free from restraint. There are manifold restraints to which every person is necessarily subject for the common good. On any other basis organized society could: not exist with safety to its members. Society based on the rule that each one is a law unto himself would soon be confronted with disorder and anarchy. Real liberty for all could not exist under the operation of a principle which recognizes the right of each individual person to use his own, whether in respect of his person or his property, regardless of the injury that may be done to others.

Courts have subsequently, and recently, applied the standard set forth in Jacobson to assess the constitutionality of a state or local official's exercise of emergency police powers. See, e.g., Best Supplement Guitig LLC v. Newsom, Case No. 2:20-ov-00965-JAM-CKS, 2020 WL 2615022 (E.D. Cal. May 22, 2020); Henry v. DeSantis, Case No. 20-cv-80729-SINGHAL, 2020 WL

In Jacobson, the U.S. Supreme Court addressed a claim that the state's compulsory vaccination law, which was enacted during a growing smallpox epidemic, violated the defendant's Fourteenth Amendment right “to care for his own body and health in such a way as to him seems best”  Jacobson, 197 U.S. at 26. Instead, a “community has the right to protect itself against an epidemic of disease which threatens the safety of its members.”  Id. at 27. Thus, in explaining a state's police power to combat an epidemic, the Supreme Court explained:

*5 [I]n every well-ordered society charged with the duty of conserving the safety of its members the rights of the individual in respect of his liberty may, at times, under the pressure of great dangers, be subjected to such restraint, to be enforced by reasonable regulations, as the safety of the general public may demand.

Id. at 29.

Importantly, it is “no part of the function of a court to decide which measures are likely to be the most effective for the protection of the public against disease.”  In re Abbott, 954 F. 3d 772, 778 (5th Cir. 2020) (quoting  Jacobson, 197 U.S. at 29).

When, as here, a court is faced with a Society-threatening epidemic, “a state may implement emergency measures that curtail constitutional rights so long as the measures have at least some ‘real or substantial relation’ to the public health crisis and are not ‘beyond all question, a plain, palpable invasion of rights secured by the fundamental law.’” Id. at 784 (quoting Jacobson, 197 U.S. at 31).

1. The Emergency Ordinance Bears a Real and Substantial Relationship to the COVID-19 Pandemic

The novel COVID-19 virus is extremely infectious and can “easily spread through droplets generated when an infected person coughs or sneezes, or through droplets of saliva or discharge from the nose,” See Best Supplement Guide, LLC, 2020 WL 2015022, at *3. Indeed, this fact was considered by the Board during Its June 23, 2020., meeting- See Leon County's exhibit 1 at Final. Hearing, Additionally, the Centers for Disease Control recommends the use of cloth face coverings in public settings when other social distancing measures are difficult to maintain.

As explained above, the numbers; in Florida, including Leon County, are continuing to rise, and the Emergency Ordinance, which requires use of face coverings in limited circumstances (i.e., in business establishments), seeks to temper the rise of positive cases and slow down the rate of infection. Similar emergency actions taken by local governments have been determined to have a real and substantial relationship to public health during the current COVID-19 pandemic. See, e.g., Prof I Beauty Fed'n v. Newsom, Case No. 2:20-cv-04275-RGK-AS, 2020 WL 3056126, at *6 (CD, Cal, June 8, 2020) (finding the stay-at-home order which temporarily closed cosmetology businesses bears a real and substantial relationship to public health because spread of COVID-19 is more likely when people are in close contact, such as hair stylists and barbers); Best Supplement Guide, LLC, 2020 WL 2615022, at *3 (finding the state arid county gym closures bear a real and substantial relationship to public health when workout facilities contain high density groups, breathing heavily, and sharing equipment); Givens V. Newsom, Case No. 2:20-cv-008520JAM-CKD, 2020 WL 2307224, at *4 (E.D. Cal. May 8, 2020) (finding a stay-at-home order bears a real and substantial relationship to public health because it sought to slow the rate of transmission). Accordingly, the Emergency Ordinance bears a real and substantial relationship to the current public health crisis.

2. The Emergency Ordinance is Not Beyond All Question a Plain, Palpable Invasion of Fundamental Rights

The second question to be addressed under Jacobson is whether the Emergency Ordinance is “beyond all question, a plain, palpable invasion of rights secured by the fundamental law.” Jacobson, 197 U.S. at 31. “Although courts have not yet defined the precise contours of this standard, it plainly puts a thumb on the scale in favor of upholding state and local officials' emergency public health responses.” Best Supplement Guide, LLC, 2020 WL 2615022, at *4.

*6 The temporary mandate to wear face coverings in public, in limited circumstances, is similar to the Other health measures designed to protect the public's health, safety, and welfare. E.g., motorcycle helmet laws, seatbelt laws, and prohibitions against smoking in public buildings, Picou v. Gillum, 874 F.2d 1519, 1521-22 (11th Cir. 1989); (“Inhere is little that could be termed private in the decision whether to wear safety equipment [in public].” The stated purpose of the Emergency Ordinance is to limit the spread of this contagious, airborne virus, and the County has provided ample evidence which indicates that face coverings may assist in reducing the spread of recognized constitutional right not to wear a facial covering in public locations or to expose other citizens and visitors to Leon County to a contagious and potentially lethal virus during a declared pandemic emergency.” Gmen v. Alachua Cty., Case No. 01-2020-CA-001249 (Fla, 8th Cir. Ct. May 26, 2020). As such, I find that the Emergency Ordinance is not beyond all question, a plain and palpable invasion of rights secured by fundamental law.

Even if the Jacobson test did not apply to the present matter, and instead, the normal levels of scrutiny applied, Plaintiff's claims must fail.

3. Right to Privacy

Plaintiff first asserts that the Emergency Ordinance violates the Privacy Clause of Article 1 § 23 of the Florida Constitution. Article 1 § 23 provides in relevant part:

Every natural person has the right to be let alone and free from governmental intrusion into the person's private life except as otherwise provided herein,

As explained in Winfield v. Dtv. of Pari-Mutuel Wagering, Dep't of Bus. Reg., 477 So. 2d 544, 547 (Fla. 1985), the “right of privacy is a fundamental right which ... demands the compelling state interest standard.” “The burden can be met by demonstrating that the challenged regulation serves a Compelling state interest and accomplishes its goal through the use of the least intrusive means.” Winfield, 477 So. 2d at 547. However, the constitutional right to privacy does not confer an absolute guarantee against governmental intrusion into one's private life and the right will “yield to Compelling government interests.” Id. Importantly, “before the right of privacy is Attached, and the delineated standard applied, a reasonable expectation of privacy must exist.” Id. (emphasis added); see also Daniel v. Daniel, 922 So. 2d 1041 (Fla. 4th DCA 2006) (explaining that courts must first determine if the individual possesses a legitimate expectation of privacy in the information or subject at issue).

Here, there is not and cannot be a legitimate expectation of privacy. The Eighth Judicial Circuit in Alachua County recently addressed a nearly identical claim in Green v. Alachua Cty., Case No. 01-2020-CA-001249 (Fla. 8th Cir. Ct. May 26, 2020). In that case, the plaintiff sought an injunction enjoining Alachua County from enforcing a similar face covering requirement. Green, Case No. 01-2020-CA-001249. Judge Keim held that “[t]here is no recognized constitutional right not to wear a facial covering in public locations or to expose other citizens of the county to a contagious and potentially lethal virus during a declared pandemic emergency.” Id. (emphasis in original). Judge Keim then compared the mandate to wear masks in limited circumstances to the requirement to wear helmets or seatbelts. Id. “The stated purpose for the mask requirement is to limit the spread of this contagious, airborne virus. ... An Alachua County citizen's right to be let alone is no more precious than the corresponding right of his fellow Citizens not to become infected by that person and potentially hospitalized.” Id. (emphasis added).

No recognized right to a reasonable expectation of privacy exists in a public location. See Picou v. Gillum, 874 F.2d 1519, 1521 (11th Cir. 1989) (examining Florida's motorcycle helmet laws and holding that “[t]here is little that could be termed private in the decision whether to wear safety equipment on the open road,”); see also Pottinger v. City of Miami, 810 F. Supp. 1551 (S.D. Fla. 1992) (noting an individual does not have a protected legitimate expectation of privacy in *7 Activities such as sleeping and eating in public). Nothing within in the Emergency Ordinance requires the County's citizens to use a face covering in private. Instead, the Emergency Ordinance only requires the use of face coverings in limited public circumstances, and provides certain exceptions to that requirement.

Even If Plaintiff had a recognized right to privacy, which he does not, Plaintiff's claim fails. When a statute encroaches on fundamental constitutional rights, such as the right to privacy, the Strict scrutiny test applies. Under this test, “the statute ... must be narrowly tailored to achieve the state's purpose,” States v. Robinson, 873 So. 2d 1205, 1214 (Fla. 2004) (internal citations omitted). “[T]he State must prove that the legislation furthers a compelling state interest through the least intrusive means.” Silvio Membreno & Fla. Ass'n of Vendors, Inc. v. City of Hialeah, 188 So. 3d 13, 22 (Fla. 3d DCA 2016); see also Mitchell v. Moore, 786 So. 2d 521, 527-238 (Fla. 2001). “Narrowly tailored” means that “the method for remedying the asserted malady must be strictly tailored to remedy the problem in the most effective way and must not restrict a person's rights more than absolutely necessary.”  Mitchell, 786 So. 2d at 527.

It is clear that the County's interest in minimizing the spread of COVID-19 is a state interest, See Murray v. Cuomo, Case No. 1:20-cv-03571-MKV., 2020 WL 2521449, at *10n. 12 (S.D.;N.Y. May 18, 2020) (“Courts have held that the Government's interest in minimizing the spread of deadly infectious disease is a Compelling state interest.”); SH3 Health Consulting, LLC v. Page, Case No. 4:20-cv-00605 SRC, 2020 WL 2308444, at *8 (E.D. Mo. May 8, 2020) (finding the “City and County adopted the Orders in this case to serve a compelling state interest — their interest in maintaining the health and safety of the public during a global pandemic, and to slow the transmission of COVID-19”);  Glsh v. Newsom, No. EDCV20755JGBK.KX, 2020 WL 1979970* 2A *6 (C.D. Cal. Apr. 23, 2020) (finding slowing the spread of COVID-19 is a “state interest that is not only legitimate but compelling”). Contrary to Plaintiff's assertion, “the curve has not been successfully flattened. As explained above, Florida, including Leon County, has recently experienced a surge of positive COVID-19 cases. The Emergency Ordinance seeks to temper this rise in positive cases and reduce the transmission of the potentially deadly virus among the County's citizens.

Furthermore, it is clear that the Emergency Ordinance is narrowly tailored to achieve that interest the Board considered evidence that the use of facial coverings assists to prevent and slow the spread of COVID-19. The Emergency Ordinance only applies in business establishments and includes a multitude of exceptions to wearing the face coverings. The court in Calvary Chapel of Bangor v. Mills, Case No. 1:20-cv-0Q156-NT, 2020 WL 2310913, at *9 (D. Me. May 9, 2020), addressed a similar claim. In that case, the court addressed claims that the Governor's orders issued in response to COVID-19 that limited the size of gatherings to ten people violated Calvary Chapel's constitutional and statutory rights. Finding the orders were neutral on their face, the court rejected Calvary Chapel's Free Exercise of Religion Clause, Calvary Chapel of Bangor, 2020 WL 23310913, at *7. The court further explained that even if the orders were subject to heightened scrutiny, the Governor would be able to show a compelling government interest in preventing the spread of COVID-19 and that the order is narrowly tailored to achieve that interest when drive-in or streamed religious services were not restricted. Id. at *9 n.17.

*8 The Emergency Ordinance, therefore, Withstands Strict scrutiny.

4. Substantive Due Process

Next, Plaintiff claims the Emergency Ordinance Violates the substantive due process clause found in Article 1, section 9, of the Florida Constitution, which provides that “[n]o person shall” be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law.” Specifically, Plaintiff asserts the Emergency Ordinance is “not backed by a compelling state interest or any facts proving such interest” particularly when, according to Plaintiff, the “curve has been successfully flattened” and hospitalizations in Leon County have decreased. Compl. ¶ 13.

“Substantive due process protects fundamental rights that are so ‘implicit in the concept of ordered liberty’ that neither liberty nor justice would exist if they were sacrificed,” Jackson v. Stats, 191 So. 3d 423, 428 (Fla. 2016) (quoting  Palko v. Conn., 302 U.S. 319, 325-20 (1937)). These special liberty interests usually include “the rights to marry, to have children, to direct the education and upbringing of one's children, to marital privacy, to Use contraception, to bodily integrity, and to abortion.”  Doe V. Moore, 410 F. 3d 1337,1343 (11th Cir. 2005) (citation omitted). Indeed, courts have been reluctant to expand substantive due process by recognizing new fundamental rights, Id. Thus, “[a]nalyzing a substantive due process claim begins with a ‘careful description of the asserted right.’” Jackson, 191 So. 3d at 428 (quoting  Reno v. Flores, 507 U.S. 292,302 (1993)).

Here, Plaintiff attempts to implicate the right to privacy and freedom of religion. Both are recognized as fundamental rights.⁵ See  State v. J.P., 907 So. 2d 1101, 1109 (Fla. 2004); Joseph v. Slate, 642 So. 2d 613, 614 (Fla. 4th DCA 1994).

As discussed, previously and below, Plaintiff does not have a fundamental right implicated by the Emergency Order; therefore, his substantive due process rights have not been violated because the county has a compelling interest in slowing the spread of COVID-19 and the Emergency Ordinance is narrowly tailored to that interest. See, e.g., Antietam Battlefield KOA v. Hogan, Case No. CV (Text redacted in copy), 2020 WL 2556496, at *13 (D. Md. May 20, 2020) (finding that the order, which allowed drive-in, virtual and small religious services and gatherings, would fail under strict scrutiny); Legacy Church, Inc. v. Kunkel, Case No. CIV 20-0327 JB/SCY, 2020 WL 1905586 (D.N.M. Apr. 17, 2020) (finding that even if strict scrutiny applies, the church was not likely to succeed on the merits, given the state's police powers to protect the public health and because the religious organizations could still broadcast their services to followers via the internet and over television).

5. Void for Vagueness

*9 Plaintiff also claims the Emergency Ordinance violates Article 1, section 9, of the Florida Constitution, because section 3(ii)(b) is void for vagueness. Section 3(ii)(b) of the Emergency Ordinance lists exceptions to the face covering requirement, and provides that tile requirement does not apply to:

Persons who have trouble breathing due to a chronic pre-existing condition Or individuals with a documented or demonstrable medical problem. It is the intent of this provision that those individuals who cannot tolerate a facial covering for a medical, sensory or any other condition which makes it difficult for them to utilize covering and function in public are not required to wear one.

See Emergency Ordinance 20-15, g 3(ii)a. Plaintiff claims this part of the Emergency Ordinance fails to define terms like “chronic pre-existing,” “documented,” “demonstrable medical problem,” and “sensory,” and that the exception is too vague for the average citizen to understand.

A statute or ordinance is considered void for vagueness when, because of its imprecision, give adequate notice of what conduct is prohibited and, therefore, invites arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement. Wychee v. Statt, 619 So. 2d 231, 236 (Fla. 1993). To test vagueness, the court must determine if the statute or ordinance “gives a person of ordinary intelligence fair notice of what constitutes forbidden conduct.” Kuvin v. City of Coral Gables, 62 So. 3d 625, 639-40 (Fla. 3d BCA 2010) (quotation omitted). “The fact that several interpretations of an ordinance may be possible does not render a law void for vagueness.” City of Daytam Beach v. Del Percio, 476 So. 2d 197, 200 (Fla. 1985). Indeed, “[w]ords inevitably contain germs of uncertainty, but When regulations are set out in terms that the ordinary person exercising ordinary common sense can sufficiently understand and comply with, [there is no] sacrifice to the public interest.” Id. (quotation marks and citation omitted). Moreover, a less stringent standard is applied when* as here* the court examines noncriminal statute or Ordinance, Zerweck v. State Comm'n on Ethics, 409 So. 2d 57, 60 (Fla. 4th DCA 1982).

In Davis v. Gilchrsit Cty. Sheriff's Office, 280 So. 3d 524 (Fla. 1st DCA 2019), the county sheriffs office filed a petition seeking a risk protection order and removal of a deputy sheriffs firearms pursuant to a “red flag” statute enacted in response to the shootings at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School. The statue provided:

Upon notice and a hearing on the matter, if the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that the respondent poses a significant danger of causing personal injury to himself or herself or others by having in his or her custody pr control, or by purchasing, possessing, or receiving, a firearm or any ammunition, the court must issue a risk protection order for a period that it deems appropriate) up to and including but not to exceed 12 months.

Davis, 280 So 3d at 528 (citing § 790.401(3)(b), Fla. Stat.). The deputy sheriff challenged the statute's constitutionality, claiming it was void for vagueness because the terms “significant danger,” “relevant evidence” and “mental illness” were not defined. Id. at 532. The court in Davis determined, however, that there was “nothing inherently vague” about the terms the appellant sought to scrutinize. Id. The court explained that the word “significant” in a manner consistent with standard dictionary synonyms means noteworthy, or worthy of attention and consequential, Id. Further, the term “relevant” is commonly used. Id. Thus, the court in Davis upheld the constitutional integrity of the statute, Id. at 533.

*10 Like the terms challenged in Davis, the words in the Emergency Ordinance with which Plaintiff takes Issue are not inherently vague such that a person of common intelligence must guess as to their meaning. Indeed, the “chronic” as in “chronic pre-existing” is synonymous with the terms long-lasting or enduring, while the term “pre-existing” is self-explanatory (i.e., something that existed before). See Sims v. State, 510 So. 2d 1045, 1047 (Fla. 1st DCA 1987) (explaining that even if critical words are not statutorily defined, “they can be readily understood by reference to commonly accepted dictionary definitions”) (citations omitted). Additionally, Plaintiff admits that the term “documented” means “described” or “recorded,” Compl. ¶ 14. The term “demonstrable” as in “demonstrable medical problem” means evident or capable of being demonstrated. Lastly, the use of the terms “medical problem” and “sensory” are explained in the Ordinance as conditions that may make it difficult for the person to wear a face covering and function in public. Plaintiff has not, and cannot, show that these phrases cannot be understood by persons of common intelligence. Therefore, Plaintiff has not shown that the Emergency Ordinance, beyond all question, is a plain, palpable invasion of his due process rights, See Oivens, 2020 WL 2307224, at *9 (denying a motion for temporary injunction seeking to enjoin an ordinance postponing or cancelling all gatherings during COVID-19 on the grounds that the ordinance was void for vagueness).

6. Equal Protection

Next, Plaintiff asserts that the Emergency Ordinance violates the Equal Protection Clause in Article 1, section 2, of the Florida Constitution. The Equal Protection Clause provides:

All natural persons, female and male alike, are equal before the law and have inalienable rights, among which are the right to enjoy and defend life and liberty* to pursue happiness, to be rewarded for industry, and to acquire, possess and protect property. No person shall be deprived of any right because of race, religion, national origin, or physical disability.

Here, Plaintiff claims the Emergency Ordinance violates this clause because it exempts certain government employees. Specifically, the Emergency Ordinance in section 3 (ii)c. provides that the face covering requirement does not apply to “[p]ublic safety, fire, and other life safety and health Care personnel, as their personal protective equipment requirements will be governed by their respective agencies.” (Emphasis supplied). The exemption, however, also applies to nongovernmental employees. For example, the exemption would cover doctors and nurses working in Leon County.

Where, as here, the challenged provision does not involve a suspect class or fundamental right, the rational basis test will apply to evaluate an equal protection challenge. See Estate of McCall v. United States, 134 So. 3d 894, 901 (Fla. 2014), “To satisfy the rational basis test, a statute must bear a rational and reasonable relationship to a legitimate state objective, and it cannot be arbitrary or capriciously imposed.” Id. (citation omitted). Stated otherwise, “the test for consideration of equal protection is whether individuals have been classified separately based on a difference which has a reasonable relationship to the applicable statute and the classification can never be made arbitrarily without a reasonable and rational basis,” Id. In these circumstances, doubts must be resolved in favor of the statute’s constitutionality. Samples v. Fla. Birth-Related Neurological, 40 So 3d 18, 23 (Fla. 5th DCA 2010).

Plaintiff appears to overlook that while public safety, fire, and other life safety and; health care personnel are not subject to the Ordinance, they are nevertheless subject to whatever personal protective equipment (“PPE”) requirements are mandated by their respective agencies. This does not mean these persons will not be wearing masks. Instead, it likely means that these persons will be wearing more than just face coverings. Contrary to Plaintiff’s contention, public safety, fire, and other life safety and health care personnel are likely to have a higher risk of exposure and infection than the general population of Leon County residents due to the nature of their professions. That, in and of itself, constitutes a legitimate reason to draw a distinction between these persons and the average resident. And, given the level of contact these public health and safety personnel have with the members of the public, requiring more specified PPE is reasonably related to the goal of slowing the rate of infection and decreasing the positive cases of COVID-19 in the County. Thus, Plaintiff has not shown that the Emergency Ordinance’s designation between residents and those public health and safety individuals identified in section 3(ii)b is a violation to the Equal Protection Clause. See Prof’l Beauty Fed’n of Cal, 2020 WL 3056126, at *7 (addressing an equal protection claim related to the stay-at-home order which permitted the continuation of essential businesses); Tallywhacker, Inc. v. Cooper, Case No. 5:20-cv-218-FL, 2020 WL 3051207 (E.D. N.C. June 8, 2020) (finding a reasonable basis for distinguishing between plaintiff’s entertainment and fitness facility and restaurants and holding that the plaintiff was unlikely to succeed on their equal protection claim).

*11 Alternatively, even if section 3(ii)c. violated the Equal Protection Clause, which I find it does not, this section could be severed pursuant to section 6 (Severability), and the remainder of the Emergency Ordinance would; remain in effect

7. Freedom of Religion

Lastly, Plaintiff claims the Emergency Ordinance violates the Religious Freedom Clause of Article 1, section 3, of the Florida Constitution, which provides that “[t]here shall be no law respecting the establishment of religion or prohibiting or penalizing the free exercise thereof.” Plaintiff claims that the inclusion of places of worship in the Emergency Ordinance’s definition coupled with the possibility of civil fines is “tantamount to ‘penalizing the free exercise’ of religion” under Florida’s Constitution. Compl. ¶ 16.

In Warner v. City of Boca Raton, 887 So. 2d 1023, 1030 (Fla. 2004), the Florida Supreme Court noted that Florida courts have treated the protection of Florida’s free exercise clause “as coequal to the federal [provision], and have measured government regulations against it accordingly.” (citing  Toca v. State, 834 So. 2d 204, 208 (Fla. 2d DCA 2002); Allen v. Allen, 622 So. 2d 1369 (Fla. 1st DCA 1993)). The United States Supreme Court has explained that the free exercise clause includes the freedom to believe and the freedom to act;  Malicki v. Doe, 814 So. 2d 347, 354-55 (Fla. 2002) (citation omitted). The freedom to believe is absolute, but the freedom to act is not—conduct remains subject to regulation for the protection of society. Id. Before the right to free exercise of religion is implicated, “the threshold inquiry is whether the conduct sought to be regulated was ‘rooted in religious belief.’” Id. (citations omitted). If it is shown that the conduct at issue was rooted in religious beliefs, then the court must determine if the law regulating the conduct is neutral on its face and in its purpose. Id. (citation omitted). The State may regulate conduct through neutral laws of general applicability. Id. As such, “a law that is neutral and of general applicability need not be justified by a compelling governmental interest even if the law has the incidental effect of burdening a particular religion’s practice.” Id.

Several recent cases addressing COVID-19-related emergency orders and ordinances have addressed the implication of the free exercise clause. For example, in  South Bay United Pentecostal Church v. Newsom, 140 S.Ct 1613 (2020), the United States Supreme Court denied an application for injunctive relief enjoining the enforcement of a portion of the governor’s executive order which limited attendance at places of worship to 25% of building capacity or a maximum of 100 attendees, to limit the spread of COVID-19. Justice Roberts in his concurrence noted that similar or “more severe restrictions apply to comparable secular gatherings, including lectures, concerts, movie showings, spectator sports, and theatrical performances, where large groups of people gather in close proximity for extended periods of time.” Id. (CJ, Roberts, concurring). Justice Roberts then explained that the “precise question of when restrictions on particular social activities should be lifted during the pandemic is a dynamic and fact-intensive matter subject to reasonable disagreement,” and that when elected officials “act in areas fraught with medical and scientific uncertainties,” then latitude “must be especially broad.” Id. “When those broad limits are not exceeded, they should not be subject to second-guessing by an ‘unelected federal judiciary.’” Id.

*12 Similarly, the court in Elim Romanian Pentecostal Church v. Pritzker, No. 20-1811, 2020 WL 3249062 (7th Cir. June 16, 2020), affirmed the district court’s holding that an executive order limiting the size of public assemblies, including religious services, to reduce transmission of COVID-19, was neutral with respect to religion and supported the compelling need to safeguard the public health. COVID-19, was neutral with respect to religion and supported the compelling need to safeguard the public health during a pandemic. See also Calvary Chapel Lone Mountain v. Sisolak, Case No. 2:20-cv-00907-RFB-VCF, 2020 WL 3108716 (D. Nev. June II, 2020) (finding an emergency directive which permitted communities of worship and faith-based organizations to conduct in-person services so that no more than fifty people are gathered while respecting social distancing requirements to be neutral and of general applicability); Cross Culture Christian Ctr. v. Newsom, Case No. 2:20-cv-00832-JAM-CKD, 2020 WL 212111 (E.D. Cal May 5, 2020) (finding the orders, which directed all residents to stay home except as needed to maintain continuity of operations for certain designated sectors, were neutral and generally applicable and therefore, the plaintiffs were not likely to succeed on their free exercise claim); Cassell v. Snyders Case No. 20 C 50153, 2020 WL 2112374 (N.D. 111, May 3, 2020) (finding the plaintiffs had less than a negligible chance of prevailing on a claim, that a stay-at-home order violated the free exercise clause when the order proscribed secular and religious conduct alike).

Like the cases discussed above, the Emergency Ordinance here is neutral and is of general applicability. Indeed, the requirement to wear face coverings is not limited to places of worship, but applies to MI business establishments, which is defined as “a location with a roof overhead under which any business is conducted, goods are made or stored or processed, or where services are rendered.” See Emergency Ordinance, § 2(ii). Without more, the fact that the Emergency Ordinance refers to religious activity (while at the same time applying to other types of activity), cannot be sufficient to show that its purpose is to target religious practices for harsher treatment. See Cassell, 2020 WL at *10. The inclusion of places of worship within the Emergency Ordinance’s (illegible text) safeguarding the public during the COVID-19 pandemic. Nothing suggests that persons attending worship services are at any less risk of catching or transmitting COVID-19, such that the facial covering requirement would not further the objective to slow the spread of the virus. Accordingly, Plaintiff failed to show his right to freely exercise his religion is violated by the Emergency Ordinance.

B. Lack of all Adequate Remedy at Law

It is well-established that injunctive relief will not lie where there is an adequate remedy of law available. Meritplan Ins. Co. v. Perez, 963 So. 2d 771, 776 (Fla. 3d DCA 2007). Here, Plaintiff has failed to assert any actual damage which could not be remedied by law were the face covering requirement be held to be unconstitutional. At best, Plaintiff states, in a conclusory manner, that the “deprivation of Plaintiff’s rights cannot be remedied by money or any judgment other than an injunction.” Compl. ¶ 19. However, Plaintiff fails to assert how; if at all, the Emergency Ordinance impacts Plaintiff. See generally id. Plaintiff claims he is a resident of Leon County and a business owner who has been “negatively impacted” by the Ordinance but declines to elaborate on how Plaintiff has been negatively impacted. See id. ¶ 4. And, even assuming the Emergency Ordinance is unconstitutional, as the court in Green, Ho. 10-2020-GA-001249, explained, it is, at best, a “de minimis infringement on the ‘plaintiff’s public interactions.’”

Moreover, violation of the Emergency Ordinance is a noncriminal infraction that results in a simple civil fine. “A violation of this Emergency Ordinance does not authorize the search or arrest of an individual.” See Emergency Ordinance 20-15, § 4(i). If a person violates the Emergency Ordinance and a fine is levied, he or she would have an adequate remedy at law because he or she could contest the fine in court.

C. Irreparable Harm Absent Entry of an Injunction

*13 A temporary injunction will only be issued when the plaintiff “can clearly demonstrate that irreparable injury would follow the denial of the injunction.” Jacksonville Wee. Auth v. Beemik Builders & Constructors, Inc., 487 So. 2d 372, 373 (Fla., 1st DCA 1986) (citation omitted). “Irreparable injury will never be found where the injury complained of is ‘doubtful, eventual, or contingent.’” Id. (quotation omitted). Indeed, “[m]ere general allegations of irreparable injury are not sufficient.” Stoner v. Peninsula Zoning Comm’n, 75 So. 2d 831, 832 (Fla. 1954). Moreover, “it must appear that there is a reasonable probability, not a mere possibility, that a real injury will occur.” Miller v. MacGill, 297 So. 2d 573, 575 (Fla. 1st DCA 1974).

Plaintiff failed to assert a reasonable probability that a real injury will occur. Plaintiff has no recognizable right which is infringed upon by the Emergency Ordinance. The Emergency Ordinance requires the face covering only in limited circumstances—i.e., when a person is in a business establishment—and provides for a multitude of exceptions which may apply to Plaintiff (and the other residents of the County), including eating or drinking in a restaurant or bar, or exercising while observing social distancing guidelines. Further, Plaintiff’s assertion that he could be arrested if he does not comply with the Emergency Ordinance is entirely false,⁶ insufficient to establish irreparable harm,⁷ and contrary to the language in the Ordinance itself. Therefore, a temporary injunction is not warranted.

D. Injunctive Relief Will Serve the Public Interest

Injunctive relief may be denied where the injury to the public outweighs any individual right to relief.  Knox v. Dist. Bd. of Brevard, 821 So. 2d, 311, 314 (Fla. 5th DCA 2002); see also Dragomirecky v. Town of Ponce Inlet, 882 So. 2d 495, 497 (Fla. 5th DCA 2004) (“Where the potential injury to the public outweighs an individual’s right to relief, the Injunction will be denied.”). Here, the public interest is to keep the COVID-19 infection rate low so the disease does not spread. See Ham v. Alachua Cty. Bd. of Cty. Comm’s, Case No. 1:20-cv-00111-MW/GRJ(N,D. Fla. May 30, 2020) (addressing Alachua County’s mandatory face covering order). It is in the public interest to protect the most vulnerable from infection and to contain respiratory droplets which can carry the infection. Id. It is therefore not in the public interest to enjoin the enforcement of the Emergency Ordinance that requires face coverings in limited circumstances. As the court determined in Green, “[t]he County’s need to take measures to control the spread of COVID-19 clearly outweighs the Plaintiffs’ private interest in not wearing a mask in the limited circumstances required by [the Emergency Order]; and an injunction in this situation would disserve the public interest.” Green, Case No. 01-2020-CA-001249.

For the foregoing reasons, Plaintiff fails to establish a substantial likelihood of success on the merits which would warrant injunctive relief.

II. Plaintiffs Claim for Declaratory Relief

The test for sufficiency of a complaint seeking a declaratory judgment is not whether Plaintiff will prevail in obtaining his desired outcome, but whether he is entitled to a declaration of rights at all. See Fla. State Bd. of Dispensing Opticians v. Bayne, 204 So. 2d 34, 36 (Fla. 1967). Plaintiff must show he is in doubt as to the existence or nonexistence of some right* status, immunity, power, or privilege and that they are entitled to have such, doubt removed. See Wilson v. Cty. of Orange, 881 So. 2d 625, 631 (Fla. 5th DCA 2004). Additionally, an aggrieved party must make some showing of a real threat of immediate injury, rather than a general, speculative fear of harm that may possibly occur at some time in the indefinite future. See State of Fla., et al v. Fla. Consumer Action Network 830 So. 2d 148, 152 (Fla, 1st DCA 2002).

*14 In this regard, to invoke jurisdiction under the Declaratory Judgments Act, a bona fide, actual dispute must exist between the contending parties as to a present justiciable question. Askew v. City of Ocala, 348 So. 2d 308 (Fla, 1977); Okaloosa Island Leaseholders Ass'n, Inc. v. Okaloosa Island Auth., 308 So. 2d 120 (Fla. 1st DCA 1975). It is well-settled that a plaintiff who seeks declaratory judgment must show the following:

Before any proceeding for declaratory relief should be entertained it should be clearly made to appear that there is a bona fide, actual, present practical need for the declaration; that the declaration should deal with a present, ascertained or ascertainable state of facts of present controversy as to a state of facts; that some immunity, power, privilege or right of the complaining party is dependent upon the facts or the law applicable to the facts; that there is some person or persons who have or reasonably may have an actual, present, adverse and antagonistic interest in the subject matter, either in fact or law; that the antagonistic and adverse interests are all before the court by proper process or Class representation and that the relief sought is not merely the giving of legal advice by the courts or the answer to questions propounded from curiosity.

May v. Holley, 59 So. 2d 636, 639 (Fla. 1952);  Santa Rosa Cty. v. Admin, Comm., Div. of Admin. - Ergs., 661 So. 2d 1190, 1192-93 (Fla, 1995). For the foregoing reasons, this Court finds that Plaintiff is not entitled to a declaration in his favor. It is now, therefore, FOUND, ORDERED, and ADJUDGED: of Plaintiff or others;

1. Leon County Emergency Ordinance 20-15 does not violate any constitutional right of Plaintiff or others;
2. No grounds exist for entry of injunctive relief, temporary or otherwise; and
3. Plaintiff is not entitled to a declaration in his favor.

ORDERED in Tallahassee, Leon County, Florida, on this 27th day of July, 2020.

<<signature>>

JOHN C. COOPER

Circuit Court Judge

Footnotes

- 1 See <https://www.edc.gov/coronavirus/2019-ncov/prevent-getting-sick/prevention.html>
- 2 The State of emergency was extended in Executive Order 20-114 issued on May 8, 2020 and again in Executive Order 20-166 issued July 7, 2020.
- 3 See <https://www.forbes.com/sites/mattpere/2020/06/25/ten-times-more-people-have-covid-19-antibodies-than-are-diagnosed-edc-reports/#6f51a6ae7293> (citing June 25, 2020, statement by Dr. Robert Redfield, Director of the Centers of Disease Control, that there are 10 times more people testing positive for COVID-19 antibodies than there are peoples being diagnosed with the virus.)

- 4 The court in Dodero, et al., denied a motion for temporary injunction seeking to enjoin a local ordinance closing down local beaches in light, of COVID-19.
- 5 It is questionable whether Plaintiff's claims truly implicate fundamental rights. The fact that a challenged law "may have an indirect effect on a fundamental right does not subject it to strict scrutiny." See Jackson v. State, 137 So. 3d 470, 475-46 (Fla. 4th DCA 2014) (citations omitted). Indeed, the root of Plaintiff's claim concerns the right to not wear a face covering in public, which the court in Green, Case No. 01-2020-CA-001249, determined was not a constitutional right. Further, the Emergency Ordinance, as it applies to religion, is neutral on its face. Under such circumstances, the rational basis test would apply. Further, the use of face masks is rationally related to the legitimate interest of slowing the spread of COVID-19. See Henry v. DeSantis, Case No. 20-cv-80729-SINGHAL, 2020 WL 2479447 (S.D. Fla. May 14, 2020). Nevertheless, the Court wil address the Emergency Ordinance under the strict scrutiny test.
- 6 The Emergency Ordinance specifically provides, "A violation of this Emergency Ordinances does not authorize the search or arrest of an individual." See Emergency Ordinance, § 4 (i)
- 7 In fact, the Emergency Ordinance provides a schedule of fines for violating the Ordinance and also permits "other remedies available at law or equity, including injunction." See Emergency Ordinance, § 4 (i)(d).

End of Document

© 2020 Thomson Reuters. No claim to original U.S. Government Works.